

Written for the Sunday Morning Bazaar.
I LOVE YOU.

Oh, I love you; oh believe
No matter what may come and go,
No matter who may love or deceive,
In all life's journey to and fro—
I love you.

Darling, I love you; you are one,
Far distant miles or a day's sight,
Time's dull, unceasing monotony
But measures thought to you in flight—
I love you.

Darling, I love you; and I love
To see and hear you and to be so long,
To be and fall with you and remain,
Or break in anxious still and strong—
I love you.

Darling, I love you; naught can bring
One change to you from all of tears
Still, still, you are my heart's one king—
Thro' doubts, thro' trials, sorrow, fears—
I love you.

The groom is paying teller in the Mercantile National Bank. After the wedding the bride and groom contemplate a visit to the World's Exposition at New Orleans, and on their return will make Louisiana their future home.

—"Their story runneth thus." They were invited to dinner with a very beautiful society young lady who is up to all the little social customs that pertain to table etiquette as well as in other matters, and there were finger bowls, of course there were, cut glass and holding Adam's ale as clear as ever glared in the fountains of Paradise, but also bearing like a lovely island a thin slice of lemon. Did they daintily dip their fingers in the bowl at the end of the repast and dry them on the perfumed napkins—price, four dollars per dozen, by the dozen—at hand? Alas! No! they got a while and then quietly drank all but the bowls, remarking after having done so, "Why, Miss— that was very poor lemonade, indeed." Tableau! the other dude guest horror stricken, Miss— all broken up and they of the story hugging each other in imagination over the "little joke" they had successfully engineered.

—Although leap year is beginning to wane yet none the less are its peculiar privileges enjoyed, and last Tuesday evening, quite a number of its devotees participated in a party, given at the residence of Mrs. Anna Felix, on West Third street. The guests first assembled at the residence of Mrs. Dora Pattison, on Kentucky street, to make their preliminary arrangements, the ladies drawing by lot the names of the gentlemen whom they escorted. After proceeding to the residence of Mrs. Felix, the evening was most delightfully whirled away with music by Prof. and Mrs. Lucy, little Miss May Wallace and others, and the partaking of very choice refreshments of cakes, fruits, ices, confectionery and nuts. Mrs. Felix made a very charming hostess, and numbered among her guests, Prof. and Mrs. Lucy, Mrs. Dora Pattison, Misses Estia Pilkington, Miriam Davis, Emma and Kittie Kidd, Dora Cartwright, Ella Rogers, Lizzie Major, Mattie Bard, Alice Bixby, and Messrs. Jas. Allison, J. E. McQuitty, Leonard Robinson, S. McIlhenry, Geo. McVey and Frank Hughes.

WEDDINGS.

Mr. Charles Stewart, a prominent young attorney of Norwalk, Ohio, and his bride, formerly Miss Mayme Cary, of the same place, were at the Merchants' hotel, in this city last Friday. Miss Cary was the daughter of M. G. Cary, deceased, formerly a prominent superintendent of the Missouri Pacific & Wabash railways, and will be remembered here by a number of the society people, as having been the guest of Misses Ella and Belle Hall. She is beautiful, intelligent and charming, and the following account of her wedding, which took place on the 26th of November, from the Norwalk Experiment, will prove of interest:

Last Wednesday evening, at about 7:30 o'clock, a marriage was solemnized which will long be remembered as one of the best matches ever consummated in our city.

Mr. Charles H. Stewart and Miss Mayme Cary were the contracting parties, and were joined as man and wife by Rev. W. F. McDowell, of Oberlin, (a college mate of the groom), at the residence of Mr. Q. P. Dunbar, on State Street, Misses Jennie Dunbar and Frankie Cary, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaids. The wedding was a very quiet affair, none but the near relatives of the party being present.

Mr. Stewart is a rising young attorney of this city and was formerly editor and proprietor of the Daily News.

Miss Cary is well known to most of our people, and among all her acquaintances is a general favorite. A young lady of rare beauty, highly accomplished, and of modest deportment, she was a gem of priceless value to the young husband.

A number of elegant presents from the relatives and the more intimate friends of the young couple were displayed.

The couple were treated to a delicious repast, after the ceremony, and after this had been partaken of, the bride and groom took the west-bound Lake Shore train for the bridal tour. They will visit Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis, and contemplate a trip down the Mississippi to New Orleans, and expect to be absent from home about three weeks.

The wedding of Miss Cora Liggett—well known in this city where she has often been a guest—took place last Wednesday evening at her home in St. Louis. The groom, Mr. John Fowler, is of the firm of Malin & Fowler, of the same city.

The bride's costume, very elegant in its simplicity, was of heavy white corded silk, with long, square train, devoid of trimming, and the petticoat veiled by three deep flounces of exquisite duchess point overlying a puff of satin at the lower edge. The corsage, point back and front, had a cluster of starry-eyed jessamines on the back point, and was made high in the throat, with elaborate garniture of point lace fastened by a diamond crescent and star. A spray of jessamine nestled in the tulle veil and confined it to the hair. The diamond ear-rings in her ears were presented by the groom.

The presents were all displayed on a number of tables and were of great variety, beauty and value. Among them were a deed to a house and lot from the bride's father, a check for $1,500 from her mother, a very elegant mahogany bookcase with mirrored back and a grand piano from an uncle of the groom, a full breakfast service of silver from Mrs. Larkworthy, an aunt of the groom and many others.

The newly wedded Mr. and Mrs. Fowler will spend their honeymoon in Cuba, returning by the way of New Orleans.

THE NEW K. OF P. HALL.

A Handsome Edifice Which Indexes the Prosperity of the Lodge.

Among the many handsome edifices now in course of construction in this city, perhaps there are none more worthy of mention or likely to prove of lasting credit and usefulness than the elegant building and hall of Sedalia Lodge No. 27, Knights of Pythias. The edifice is situated on Fifth street, between Ohio and Lamine streets, directly opposite the new court house, and comprises three different buildings, each with a front of twenty-five feet, the central one being that owned by the lodge; the one on the west is the property of Maj. W. H. Hodgins, while the one on the east belongs to G. W. Huff.

The K. P. building is the most high the upper story being the one appropriated to the use of the lodge and built especially to that view. The stairway leads up from the east side to a landing, in front of which is the front room; turning to the west, a door admits the visitor into a large reception room fronting onto Fifth street and lighted by large blue glass windows, from which a fine view of the court house is obtained. Another door from this room leads into the preparation room on the east of which are arranged two properly rooms passing to the end of the building which is 21x52, lighted by plate glass windows on the southeast and west sides, and is one of the handsomest and most comfortable halls in the city, and when finished and fitted out will be the most elegant in the west. The practitioners complete their work yesterday, and it is expected to have everything finished in time for its dedication during the first week in January.

On the second floor of this building the front is occupied by offices and the rear by another hall, the same as the one above. What will be made of this hall is not yet definitely decided, but negotiations are a present pending between the lodge and a church congregation which will probably be consummated by its being taken for a time at least for a time for devotional purposes. The lower story contains a store room which has already been occupied by Alder and Campbell, grocers.

Just west of this edifice is situated the elegant which lives with it in proportion and beauty and into which Messrs. Ritchie and Co. have just removed their furniture establishment. The second story being devoted to the use of the Y. M. C. A. as has been heretofore mentioned. It is expected to have the rooms of this association completed about the same time that the K. P. hall will be finished and a reception and dedicatory services will then be held there also.

THAT ELOPEMENT.

Mr. Harris Emphatically Denies the Foul Charge.

The BAZOO a few days since gave the particulars of an alleged elopement in Nebraska with which the name of Louis Harris, formerly a well known and popular young Sedalian, but now of St. Joseph, was coupled. Concerning the matter yesterday's St. Joseph Gazette contains the following:

Louis Harris, a young man in the employ of H. Marks & Co. hide dealers, on Third and Main streets, and who was said to have eloped with Mrs. J. P. Notley, of Beatrice, Nebraska, returned home yesterday and was met by a Gazette reporter, who proceeded to interview him on the subject of the elopement.

"It is a lie manufactured out of whole cloth," said he, "and I am glad you have given me an opportunity of so stating."

"What gave rise to the rumor?" "Notley," the deserted husband, met a reporter of the Kansas City Journal at Hialeah, Kas., a few days ago, and the charge was then preferred against me by Notley and published as a special dispatch in the Journal of the following morning. As soon as it came under my observation I sought Notley and asked why he had falsely accused me, and he replied that a man named Butler had told him that he had seen me in the company of Mrs. Notley at Wyomere, Neb., on the evening she left that place."

"Was this charge true?"

"No, it was false. I was in Wyomere on the evening in question, but I never met Mrs. Notley."

"Are you acquainted with the woman?"

"Oh, yes, I knew her before she was married, and I have met her since, but have not spoken to her for six months past."

"Do you know the man Butler who claimed that he saw you in Mrs. Notley's company?"

"No, and I believe him to be a myth. No one in Wyomere is acquainted with him, and it is my opinion that Notley started the report himself. He naturally inferred, I suppose, that because I was acquainted with his wife, and she had deserted him, I had eloped with her."

HEADLIGHT.

—Two new freight trains have been put on the Lexington branch. Their numbers are 7 and 8.

—It is stated on good authority that the Missouri Pacific intends to put down a new platform between the tracks at the Union depot soon.

—Workmen were yesterday engaged in excavating for a new track which is to be put in immediately in the rear of the business houses fronting on Main street. It will be used as a passenger track.

—A good joke is told on the East End boys. They had been tussling along with the new moguls, and finally they swore that no such piece of machinery could be used to advantage. This very wide derision the BAZOO knocks in the head when it learns the record of No. 857, which has been doing duty on the West End for the past few weeks. This engine is a daisy, and responds to Pat's such like that of a mother to a child. She is not only a daisy, but a most practicable piece of machinery, and the BAZOO hopes that Pat and his confederates may live long and prosper.
